

ABOUT US

Illinois House has stood proudly on the northwest corner of the Old Courthouse Square since 1902. Originally built as a hotel called The Illinois, it was known as the most luxurious hotel ever to grace Downtown Bloomington. In 1977, exactly 75 years after The Illinois opened, a group of three local men, John Luedtke, Darrell Hartweg and Ralph Turner, purchased the same building, now known as Illinois House. These new owners shared the same vision which was to revitalize and renovate the historic structural landmark into professional commercial office space.

Today, original owners and tenants, Ralph Turner and Darrell Hartweg, continue to preserve the Building's traditional style while incorporating modern and efficient office space for today's professional. Currently, it remains the source of premier office space in historic Downtown Bloomington.

Whether you're striving to impress or simply craving a space with style, make Illinois House your home for professional office space.
